HALLIBURTON ARRIVES AT ST. BERNARD PASS

Pachydermous Mount Unwilling

SUFFERS FROM RAREFIED ATMOSPHERE

Berne, To-day.
Mr. Richard Halliburton's trans-Alpine pilgrimage, in which he proposed to emulate Hannibal and cross the Alps on an elephant, is meeting with difficulties. The party arrived at the Hospice of St. Bernard at 2 p.m. yesterday.

The last few kilometres were the most difficult, the elephant several times refusing to go, as it was suffering from the rarefied air; but after several stops and a 2-hour halt the party finally gained the summit.

But out of consideration for the elephant they probably spent the night some way down the Italian side of the pass.—Reuter.

TRAFFIC BLOCK

A later message says that 500 spectators followed Mr. Halliburton's elephant up the last steep mile and a half up to the summit of the St. Bernard Pass. (Continued on Page 12)

BAG-SNATCHER WARNS P. C.

Announced Commission Of Crime Beforehand

SENTENCE REDUCED

"When I met the constable, I told him that I was going to do some bag snatching. I have not eaten for four days. I also asked the constable whether I would get some food to eat if I were arrested and brought to the station," stated Chung Wing-cheung, unemployed, who was sentenced to six weeks' hard labour by Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Police Court this morning for the theft of a hand-bag from Pang Wai-hung, spinster, of No. 36, Pottinger Street, on Saturday.

"As you had warned the constable before committing the theft, I am giving you six weeks instead of six months," remarked the magistrate in sentencing the accused. (Continued on Page 7)

FORTHCOMING WEDDING

The forthcoming marriage is announced of Mr. Ernest Robert Tinkham, Etomologist of Lingnam University, Canton, to Miss Virginia Francis Dunn, who is en route to the Colony by the Empress of Canada.

EPIDEMICS ARE NOW PREVALENT

FLOOD POSITION AGGRAVATED BY CLOUDBURST

URGENT APPEALS TO HEALTH OFFICIALS

Tsinan, To-day.

The whole of Western Shantung is threatened by inundation owing to the simultaneous rise of the Yellow River and other waterways, which have been swollen by the continuous rainfall. The situation has been aggravated by the collapse of the northern embankments of the Chaowang River and the Kiahsiang dykes. The inhabitants of the affected districts are fleeing to Taian and Yenchow.

A Nanking message says that urgent appeals from the prevent the spread of epidemics now prevalent there are pouring in to the National Health Administration.

Another Tsinan message says that Chinese reports state that as a result of torrential rains and a cloudburst several thousand persons have perished in and around Sichuan, Honan, near the Hupeh border.

Twenty villages were wiped out and 60 square miles of the country are affected.—Reuter.

Estimated Loss Of $200,000,000

A later message from Hankow states that the authorities estimate that public and private losses from the flood amount to about $200,000,000, of which the losses of the Han district alone are estimated at $100,000,000.—Reuter.

POSTPONEMENT OF MILITARY CONFERENCE

Thursday Next Fixed For Meeting

ASSURANCES OF LOYALTY RENEWED

[From Our Own Correspondent] Canton, To-day.
The much-heralded military conference which was scheduled to have met here on July 15 is now postponed to July 25, when all the high commanding generals will be here for the party. General Yu Han-mou, G.O.C. of the First Army, is expected to return here this morning from his native home in Shuihung on the West River.

An exchange of opinion among the brigadier and divisional commanders was made last week, but a formal gathering will take place next Thursday. It is generally understood that all the high military officers have renewed their assurances of loyalty to their chief, General Chen Chi-tang.

There are still some Communist remnants in Southern Kiangsi and along the Kwangtung-Fukien frontier. Although an official report announced yesterday the capture of so many Communists and rifles, a band of 500 Reds are roving about Taipo and Yewping in Kwangtung and Wingtung on the Fukien border.

Apart from dealing with the Red riftrif, senior military officers are discussing informally the general military defence of Kwangtung. The Swatow district and East River Valley are being studied by the military experts.

SURGING WATERS DEMOLISH KAILING RIVER DYKES

Heavy Damage Reported In Szechuen

Peiping, To-day.

A message from Chengtu states that a large portion of the dykes on the Kailing River in Szechuen have collapsed, due to the pressure of the surging waters. The damage is heavy.—Reuter.

FAIR SEX BESIEGE CANTON

LOOKING FOR JOBS AS WAITRESSES

STRICT REGULATIONS ENFORCED

[From Our Own Correspondent]

Canton, To-day.

Over 1,000 young women have arrived in Canton from Hong Kong, Macao and places in the interior to look for jobs as waitresses in restaurants, tea shops and iced drink parlours, which are allowed to employ girls up to 20 per cent of the total waiting staff without any dismissal of existing male employees.

For fear that the managers of the eating-places will utilise the girls to use their charms for the purpose of unduly influencing the customers, the police authorities have set up certain rules which will be strictly enforced.

Waitresses are required to dress plainly like domestic servants and must wear aprons. Tight-fitting silk ensembles are prohibited. In no circumstances are they allowed to use cosmetics of any kind.

The girls are warned, when serving male patrons, not to flirt with them. The waitresses must just take the orders or may suggest a few of the favourite dishes, but all conversation must be strictly on "business" lines. These female workers must not sleep in the restaurants after working hours. Opium smoking dens and Chen-Tung restaurants which professional beauties may visit, are not employ waitresses.

BRITISH LEGION VISIT TO GERMANY

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES AT MUNICH WAR MEMORIAL

"CHINA MAIL" SPECIAL

Munich, To-day.

An impressive ceremony was held yesterday in front of the War Museum, when the British Legion delegation visited the war memorial and paid a tribute to the inhabitants of Munich who fell in the great war.

Large detachments of the various ex-soldiers' associations, including the Kyffhauser League and the National Socialist Front-line Soldiers' Association, formerly known as the Steel Helmets, were drawn up round the memorial, bearing their old regimental flags.

The members of the British Legion inspected the ranks of the old soldiers, shaking hands with those who were severely injured in the war as a mark of especial respect.

MIRACLE PERFORMED

In his address the President of the Bavarian Order of the Medal for Bravery emphasised that the respect expressed to-day for former opponents was not the result of any change in sentiment, but admiration for a brave, chivalrous enemy. A miracle which a few years ago would not have been believed had come to pass—men who once faced each other in desperate battles now stood shoulder to shoulder in deep emotion with no vestige of hate, paying tribute to the memory of mutual dead comrades of the world war.

TATSUTA BOUND FOR SOUTH

Rear-Admiral Returns From Macao

The Japanese river gunboat Saga, which is due back in port to-day from Macao, will leave for Canton on Wednesday.

Rear-Admiral Shosuke Shimomura, Commander-in-Chief of the 5th Destroyer Flotilla, of the Japanese Navy, will transfer his flag to H.L.T.M.S. Tatsuta on his arrival back to-day from Macao, and the cruiser will leave almost immediately on a southern cruise.

Peiping, To-day.

A message from Chungking states that the Government forces have re-captured Weichow, 100 miles north-west of Chengtu. The Red leader, Han Hsing-chen, has been severely wounded.—Reuter.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE AGAINST BUSINESS MAN

Deceased's Alleged Jump To Death

TWO NAILS SAID USED AS DAGGERS IN QUARREL

In answering a charge of manslaughter, So Shing, alias So Pat-san, alias So Cheuk-king, a local Chinese business man, appeared at the Criminal Sessions in the Supreme Court this morning before Mr. R. E. Lindsell, the Puisne Judge, who presided in the absence of His Honour the Chief Justice, Sir Atholl MacGregor, who is still indisposed.

Accused was represented by Mr. F. C. Jenkin, K.C., instructed by Mr. M. K. Lo, while Mr. J. A. Fraser, the Assistant Attorney-General, instructed by Mr. W. J. Lockhart-Smith, the Assistant Crown Solicitor, conducted the case for the prosecution.

Accused put in a plea of "Not Guilty," and the following jury were empanelled to try the case: A. M. Larcins (Foreman), M. Ching, Lai Kwan-chi, Chan Ping-sun, Wong Yin-shin, Chan Shik-sum and A. M. Tye.

In his opening address to the jury, Mr. Fraser gave the court a general impression of the situation of the house from which the deceased, Wong Pak-ku, alias Wong Cheuk-king, is stated to have jumped, allegedly from fear of what the accused and his friends might do to him.

ANSWERABLE FOR DEATH

He pointed out to the jury that if a man frightens another into jumping over a verandah and killing himself, then that man is just as guilty as if he had actually struck a blow at him and knocked him over, and is therefore answerable for the death.—(Continued on Page 12)

PROTECTOR OF THE COLOURED RACES

ITALY SEEKS MORE THAN FRENCH NEUTRALITY

INTERNATIONAL ORDER RISKED

"CHINA MAIL" SPECIAL

Paris, To-day.

The Italo-Abyssinian dispute entered on a dangerous phase as a result of the Emperor Haile Selassie's recent speech before Parliament, is the opinion held by the French press. The possibility of a rupture of diplomatic relations between the two countries is now imminent, writes the Rome correspondent of the "Petit Parisien," adding, however, that this would not necessarily mean the immediate declaration of war or actual hostilities.

The Echo de Paris considers an important factor to be the attitude of Japan, which is intent on playing the role of protector of coloured peoples.

In view of her extensive possessions in Asia and Africa, declared the paper, England will never be content to relinquish this powerful weapon of propaganda to Japan.

In consequence of this development Italy is now making stronger claims on the friendship of France, the only country which, has hitherto maintained anything approaching a benevolent attitude to Italy concerning the Abyssinian question.

DEMANDING "MORE"

But Italy is only half satisfied with mere neutrality on the part of France, asserts the paper, and is now demanding more. "The more" she will not, however, receive, states the Echo de Paris, observing that France's own situation is difficult enough and that it would be madness to sacrifice the English friendship, even though it is sometimes disappointing, for a newly created understanding with Italy.

The chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Chamber, M. Bastide, writing in the Republique, points out that Italy is setting the will of one State above (Continued on Page 12)

EUROPE'S HOUR OF DECADENCE APPROACHING

SIG. MUSSOLINI AS EMPIRE BUILDER

ITALY'S "GREAT PLACE IN THE WORLD"

Paris, To-day.

"If Europe does not feel worthy to fulfil her colonising mission in the world, then the hour of her decadence is irrevocably founded," declared Signor Mussolini in an interview with the Rome representative of the "Echo de Paris" with regard to Abyssinia.

The Duce likened himself to the British Empire builders and the great French colonisers, and asked whether the League of Nations should be a tribunal before which "negroes, savages and the backward races of the world can arraign a great nation which has revolutionised and transformed humanity?"

He declared that the decisive moment had come. He knew the difficulties, but was preparing everything with the minutest care. Next October there would be a million Italians with the colours, and he would have nothing to fear. The Italian nation had made great efforts, after which it would occupy a great place in the world.—Reuter.

OVERCOME BY THE HEAT

Strange Incident On Railway Platform

The Kowloon-Canton Railway Station was the scene of some excitement just before 2 p.m. to-day when a Chinese male, who was waiting for a train to Canton, suddenly fell on his knees and began making obeisances. His friends suspected that he was overcome by the heat and immediately gave him a cold drink, but instead of drinking it the man knelt down, clasped his hands together and worshipped the glass full of aerated water. He was, however, led away by some of his relatives and taken home.

THERMOMETER REACHES 89
The highest temperature was recorded at 2 p.m. to-day, when the thermometer reached 89 degrees Fahrenheit.
The lowest figure recorded was 80.7, at 4 a.m.

TWO TYPHOONS REPORTED

Foochow Likely To Receive Blow

A message received by the American Consulate, General from the Manila Observatory at 10.30 a.m. to-day reports two typhoons.

The first is situated in about 124 deg. East longitude and 26 deg. North latitude, moving north-north-west; that is, it is at present about 120 miles due East of the northernmost point of Formosa and is likely to strike the coast of China between Foochow and Wenchow.

The second typhoon is situated in 145 deg. East longitude and 10 deg. North latitude, i.e., over the Caroline Islands, moving west-north-west, in the direction of the Colony.

WEATHER REPORT

A weak anticyclone covers the Pacific to the east and south-east of Japan. The typhoon at 6 a.m. was situated about 100 miles to the east of North Formosa, moving west-north-west or north-west. Another typhoon is situated about 200 miles to the south of Guam, moving west-north-west. South-west winds, moderate; cloudy; local thunder showers, was the forecast for to-day, as issued by the Royal Observatory this morning.

Summer Bride's Beauty CourseNatural Make-Up Is Now The Aim

NO VIVID COLOURS

By AUDREY WRANGHAM
Beauty specialists and mothers of brides have been in conference over the question of the summer bride and her beauty preparations.

Modern opinion, veering away
from the too-lavish and spectacular use of cosmetics in public, decrees that it is in bad taste for a bride to be seen using either her powder-puff or her lipstick in the church porch or at the reception following, or to adopt a make-up that does not conform to her type of natural beauty.

Blood-red finger-nails, heavily mascaraed eyelashes, and too vivid a rouge and lipstick are taboo with the smart bride and with her attendant bridesmaids on the great day.

On the other hand, no bride will be able to give her full attention to the details of her wedding ceremony, or to her social duties at the reception, if she feels that her nose is shiny, or her cheeks flushed. Hence the decision of one specialist to devote three-quarters of her time during the summer season to beauty courses for brides beginning six weeks or a month before the wedding-day, consisting of treatments taken at the bride's own home.

Wedding Eve

A twice weekly treatment for a month or a daily treatment for a fortnight enables his expert to study the bride's type of skin, to remove minor blemishes, and to prepare it for a make-up that will last through both the church ceremony and the reception without touching-up.

This culminates in an hour's treatment after dinner, on the night before the wedding, since on the wedding morning even modern brides are too nervous and excited for anything but the make-up.

On the day itself, just before the wedding dress is put on, in a quarter of an hour the bride's make-up is completed; if she is dark a powder with a sunburn tone from the 28 shades that this specialist keeps at her St. John's Wood home is chosen; if she is fair, a peaches and cream shade.

In general, a shade lighter powder is chosen than the bride's usual one, having regard to the white wedding-gown.

No Rouge

As a powder base summer brides are being given a special lotion, which makes it impossible for their faces to appear flushed.
If their skins are inclined to be dry, they should use this only on very special occasions, and during their beauty course their skins will have been trained to take it. A paste rubbed gently on the nose before the powder is applied is a guarantee against nose-shine for at least four hours. No rouge at all is the advice of this specialist to the immortality of summer brides, and special slender-pointed pencils are used to outline the lips so that no smears or smudges are possible.

Emotional brides, who may shed a few tears in the vestry, have their eyelashes dyed a day or so before the ceremony, since the importance of the eyelash over the down-dropped eyes as the bride goes up the aisle is obvious.

Two shades of nail varnish that are especially attractive for the summer bride in white are white pearl and rose pearl, the former having the iridescence of a milky pearl and the latter faint rose bloom of a pink pearl. A finishing touch is a white flower scent, such as white lilac, white violet, or white iris.

ADVANCE FASHION NOTE

Draped Skirts Again

BUT SLIM WAIST EFFECT IS PRESERVED

The appearance of draped
skirts in the outstanding Paris collections can definitely be taken as an advance fashion note.

Lucien Delong, Schiaparelli, Bru-gere, Louiseboulanger, and Lucile Paray show interesting creations.
There is not the slightest hint of bunchiness, however, the draped effects starting well below the hips to preserve the slim waist effect.

Chanel, on the other hand, is faithful to the long, sinuous skirt, which blossoms into generous fullness at the hem. Her evening gown waistlines are raised over so slightly in front with the whole line tapering at the back in a downward movement which gives a supple, flowing line to the feminine silhouette.

Over a semi-fitted foundation of midnight-blue chiffon, Claire Dodd, actress, wears an open front sleeveless tunic of dull gold metal cloth. The hemline points toward the knees and the natural waistline is defined with a wide gold belt which fastens with two bows in front.

To wear over your suit when you've finished playing in the wraps of chintz, towelling and transparent silk that drag in the sand when you walk, and play suits of flannel, linen and gabardine to slip on when you take off your wet suit.

The Tahitian outfits have skirts

Exotic Make-Up

Complete Directions
From HollywoodEYES AND LIPS SUPPLY
CONTRAST REQUIRED

Exotic eyelids are heavily darkened with eye-shadow extending completely over the lids to the eyebrow. The eyeshadow may follow the line of the brow to its very end.

A tiny dark line is drawn around the upper lid of the eye and is allowed to extend over the eyesocket bone—at the outer edge of the eye. A line may be similarly drawn underneath
the eye, meeting the upper line at the extreme outer edge. This line is drawn with a well-sharpened dermatograph pencil, and care should be exercised that the line is not too evident.

Under the eye, a faint bit of brown eyeshadow may be used if blended carefully into the skin. This must be applied skillfully so as to avoid a dissipating effect.

Upper eyelashes should be heavily brushed with mascara.

Lips are heavily made-up and straight lined, and none of those curved cupid bows of the smiling girl. Let the lower lip be accentuated and full.

Little or no rouge should be worn with exotic make-up. The effect must be a clear skin, lightly powdered. The eyeshadow and heavy lips will give all the contrasting effect necessary. The face is always powdered before the eye and lip make-up is applied.

COLOURED LACE VEILS AND MATCHED BELTS

Many smart women are wearing the new vividly coloured lace veils and matching wide belts.
They are particularly stunning as they are the only colour touches on their dark ensemble.

Halters which created com-abbreviated wisps of fabric that cover very little of the body above the waistline. Others are long enough in front to tuck into the tops of shorts, have built-up necklines and, occasionally, little high collars that button at the back. These, too, leave shoulders and back quite bare.

Hold-Up With Two Stoppers

By Ely Culbertson

The mechanics of the simple hold-up by the declarer at a no-trump contract should be well known to all. A hold-up is made to interrupt the line of communication of the defensive team and thereby prevent it from running a suit. Most common of all is the simple hold-up, where the declarer, holding the Ace as his only stopper, does not play this Ace until the second or third round of the suit; but there are also hold-ups with more than one stopper. I once saw a hand where the declarer's best play was to hold up at trick one, holding the Ace-King-Queen-deuce of the suit. Though hands like that are very rare, it is not particularly unusual to hold up with the Ace and King. A hold-up of the latter type occurs in the hand below:

1-An alternative bid on this hand would be two notrump.

2-North, with only a little over one honour-trick and poor distribution, is not quite strong enough to give a free raise over the intervening overcall.

3-South makes the strongest possible rebid and one which forces a response from his partner.

4-North has failed to raise freely on the first round and has made an absolutely minimum forced response on the second round. His partner is still interested in game and North therefore must raise the no-trump rather than sign off by bidding three diamonds.

Against the three-notrump contract West quite naturally opened the spade Queen. South had two spade stoppers and might have fulfilled his contract even if he had won the first round of spades. To get nine tricks he had to set up at least four tricks in the minor suits and to do this he had to let the opponents in twice with their two Aces.

Nevertheless, if he won the first spade trick with the King and then guessed properly which minor suit to play first, he could fulfil his contract. In other words, if he first tackled the suit in which the West player held the Ace, West's last entry would be removed and when later the other player got in with the other Ace, the spade suit could not be run.

However, on the opening lead of the spade Queen South did not win the trick, but stayed off with both honours. This simple hold-up made it immaterial which minor suit was tackled first and South was released from the necessity of guessing. West continued with another spade and South won with the King, and he now could play either minor suit in complete safety.

South actually played his club five rather than a diamond. He did this as a possibly way of fulfilling the contract, even if the West player happened to hold both Aces. If West, with both Aces, allowed South to steal one club trick, South could now switch to diamonds and set up nine tricks before West set up his spade suit.

East won the club lead with his Ace but now had no spade to lead. When West subsequently got in with his diamond Ace, the declarer still held the spade stopper and the contract was consequently fulfilled with an over-trick.

For 10 years Dexter Cooper (above), vainly sought to interest private companies in using the high tides of the Passamaquoddy Bay, Maine, for producing electricity. Although he built the famous Kookak Dam and his work was known as a hydraulic engineer, his proposal was repeatedly rejected. But now the Government, through the Public Works Administration, is beginning expenditure of $30,000,000 near Eastport, Me., to make Cooper's dream come true.

"IT'S A SMALL WORLD"—KING'S THEATRE

"Henry VIII's" second wife, Jane Seymour, is the last of his procession of five spouses to reach Hollywood.

This latecomer is Wendy Barrie, the young and lovely English actress who is now appearing in her first American picture, Fox Film's "It's A Small World," opposite Spencer Tracy, which opens to-day at the King's Theatre.

The others who preceded her were Binnie Barnes, Elsie Lancaster (Mrs. Charles Laughton), Merle Oberon and Kathleen Greig. Miss Barrie, by her own admission, came to Hollywood without even a letter of introduction to anyone, to say nothing of a screen test and won by sheer ability.

When anyone asks Wendy Barrie, how she happened to go to Hollywood to try American Pictures she says, "It all happened because I changed my mind and it was a nice day for an aeroplane ride."

Others in the cast of "It's A Small World," which Edwin Butler produced and Irving Cummings directed, are Raymond Walburn, Virginia Sale, Astrid Allwyn, Irving Bacon, Charles Sellon, Nick Foran, Belle Danbe, Frank McGlynn, Jr., Frank McGlynn, Jr., Bill Gillis, Ed Brady and Harold Minjir.

"VAGABOND LADY"—QUEEN'S THEATRE

"In 'Vagabond Lady,' which is now showing at the Queen's Theatre, Robert Young has his first opportunity to prove that he is a very fine comedian as well as a dramatic actor. Hitherto Young has been given parts which called for serious situations and the result has been that he has never reached the pinnacle of popularity.

At last M.G.M. have given him a part which calls for humorous situations and Young makes the most of his chance. He is seen as the son of a wealthy department store owner who shocks his father and his dignified elder brother, Reginald Denby, by walking about in a pair of dungarees. He is supported by Evelyn Venable who takes the part of the daughter of 'Spiggs' the store's janitor.

Others in the cast include Bertie Churchill, Frank Craven, Forester Harvey, and Ferdinand Gottschalk.

"MARIE GALANTE"—MAJESTIC THEATRE

Ketti Gallian, the well-known Continental stage star, makes her first appearance in films in the title role of "Marie Galante," which is now being screened at the Majestic Theatre.

Spencer Tracy, the screen's fastest-wise-cracker, enhances her reputation, not only as a humorist but as a great actor.

SAFEGUARDING LIFE AT SEA

Machine Which Can Detect Leaks

Khabarovsk (U.S.S.R.).

Said to be capable of indicating the slightest leak in a ship, an instrument named the "water-signal" has been invented by an engineer named Nikolov.

Placed in the hold of a vessel the instrument is constructed to produce light and sound signals which are immediately transmitted to the bridge the moment a leak occurs or the ship is "holed."

"I AM A THIEF"—ALHAMBRA THEATRE

Ricardo Cortez, as a thief, and Mary Astor, as the woman sleuth, are in a different type of story to the usual thriller, but it very difference makes it sound entertaining.

Cortez has taken the part of a detective often enough, but this is the first time he has ever been cast as a criminal. But what a delightfully amusing criminal he turns out to be. Mary Astor is an excellent foil and seems to be improving with age. Who would believe that Mary is any older than 25, yet she was appearing in films long before tallies were heard of.

Dudley Digges adds something to the film which makes it still more enjoyable.

"FRA DIAVOLO"—STAR THEATRE

The screen's two most ridiculous Stars, Laurel and Hardy, are even more ridiculous in this delightful story which also has time to embody some excellent substance.

Laurel and Hardy are seen this time as a pair of would-be bandits who assume the name and reputation of Fra Diavolo, the worst brigand in the country, to help them in their nefarious schemes. They are successful for a while but when they are discovered by the real Diavolo the situation is hilarious.

"BRIGHT EYES"—ORIENTAL THEATRE

Shirley Temple has "won her wings" and is a very proud little girl as a result.

"Bright Eyes," her latest picture, which is screening at the Oriental Theatre to-day, has a universal appeal, in every sense of the word. Swift, human, at times pathetic, at times enormously funny, it is a story which will hold you in its spell from the opening sequence to the smashing finish.

This time she had to appear in an aeroplane scene that was unusually trying. Director David Butler told the little star to be patient and he would reward her with a present when the scene was completed. True to his word, he had a gold bracelet with two gold wings, joining together at the clasp, made for the child actress and presented them to her when the work was through.

FRANK WYKOFF MARVELS AT NEGRO'S SPEED

NEVER SEEN SUCH RUNNING EASE

OWENS IS AMERICA'S OLYMPIC HOPE

Los Angeles.
Frank Wykoff, holder of the world's 100 Yards record of 9.4 seconds, marvels at the ease with which Josie Owens, the sensational coloured athlete from Ohio State University, belittles time and space in the field of sport.

"I have never seen a man run with such ease," said Wykoff, after watching Owens in a track meet here. "He doesn't appear to be running fast at all. He isn't half trying, yet he gets there first. Those strides of his are so short, and still it doesn't appear that he moves his legs fast," he added.

Must Improve Start

One of the fastest starters the sprint world has ever known, Wykoff believes that Owens will have to improve his form coming off the mark before he is able to break the world's record. "I have to get my lead in the first 40 yards of the race, and then try and hold off my opponents. Owens appears too slow getting away now, but when he improves that, look out for records," he said.

Owens has already equalised Wykoff's 100 Yards record. He is at present America's greatest

The Americans' hard-hitting first baseman, then stepped to the plate and hit a long double to left field to score both Eirsh and Harris and thus end the game.

It would be extremely difficult to enumerate any particular stars in either team. The Japanese will probably have the safest infield in the coming League. They also showed themselves quite capable with the stick, Murata and Okawa sharing top honours. For the Americans Harris topped the batting list.

LARWOOD AS PACE BOWLER FOR HIS COUNTY

SEASON'S LOWEST
TOTAL

LANCS. INCUR HUGE LOSS
ON ACCOUNT OF WEATHER

Yorkshire, in conceding first innings points to Leicestershire last month must thank Smith for their setback. He took 6 wickets for 16 runs in one devastating spell.

Verity, however, eclipsed Smith's performance when Yorkshire took the field again, and Leicestershire, after leading by 60 runs were in a precarious position. Verity changed his pace and flight so skilfully that in half an hour Leicestershire lost 6 wickets for 20 runs.

Verity's figures were 8 for 28. He needed only four more wickets for his 100. In a previous match against Leicestershire he had 13 for 97.

Larwood Prominent

Two outstanding features of the county cricket championship match between Notts and Middlesex worth recalling were: Larwood's bowling. He sent down one over so admirably that Price and Robins—for a "duck"—were dismissed when Middlesex had reached exactly 110.

Larwood's speed was, as usual nowadays, medium, but those who believe that he is going to settle down merely as a stock bowler are likely to be surprised, for he has a thrilling break-back which, given a helpful turf, is bound to be deadly.

Larwood is still suffering from the after effects of his operation last year; they take the form of a recurrently swollen foot, and it is possible that another medical examination may be required.

There is no apparent reason why, when he has thoroughly recovered, he should not begin a new triumph as a pace-bowler for his county.

Smith's Bright Innings

Smith's innings was brief, bright, and full of bluffs and bangs that made everybody in the field tremble for their personal safety.

He drove Larwood straight down the wicket to begin with a red-hot crack that might have knocked his partner's legs off his body had not "Patsy" Hendren jumped clear. Hendren spanked him with his bat in mock reproof when they met in mid-wicket while running.

Smith then hit two mighty drives, one which made Beves, the umpire, duck behind the bowler's stumps. Except for one slip, no fielder came nearer to the batsman than 30 yards off when Smith faced Voece, and none could blame them!

Copson's Deadly Spell

Great bowling featured the clash between Derbyshire and Somerset, when the latter were dismissed for 35 runs in their second knock, the lowest total of the season.

Copson, who caused the collapse, took 5 wickets for 15 runs, and

COCHET WANTS TO PLAY TENNIS IN PHILIPPINES

HEADING TROUPE
TO MANILA

AT PRESENT PLAYING
IN INDO-CHINA

Henri Cochet, French tennis professional, at one time regarded as one of the world's outstanding players, wants to come to Manila with his troupe of professionals in the course of his tour around the world.

Jimmy Horton, president of the Manila Tennis Club, yesterday received a letter from Cochet asking him to make arrangements for exhibition matches in Manila. Cochet and his troupe are at present in Saigon.

Due Next Month

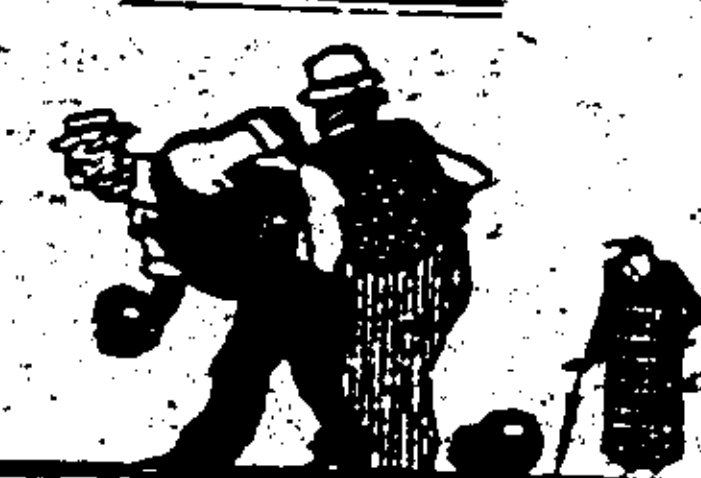

Horton will turn Cochet's letter over to officials of the Philippine Lawn Tennis Association for consideration and action. Although Cochet did not state when he wants to come here it is believed he would like to come within the next month or so.

Cochet started on a world tour on February 12, "armed with 17 tennis racquets, a couple of cases of tennis balls, motion picture apparatus and a brief case full of documents."

Official Tour

He is making his tour as an official representative of the French. His mission, according to him by the French Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Education combined, will be to spread the French Tennis creed wherever he goes.

Cochet began his tour in Egypt and has been to India. He is at present in Saigon, and plans to tour China, Japan and Australia before going to the United States. If he comes to Manila local tennis fans will be able to see in action the man who was practically proprietor of the Davis Cup for several years.

NORONHA EXCELS

The Recreio men definitely showed themselves to be the better combination, and although it was a very close-fought battle, the general opinion was that Silva's rink would manage to carry off the honours.

Silva Usual Self

C. G. Silva was his usual self and produced the form that has brought him to the head of this year's skips' table. On the day's showing he had the "better" of Omar who, although playing indifferently at times, on other occasions played a remarkably fine game.

Any "joss" that was going was usually with the losers—this was most clearly demonstrated on the 18th head. On this occasion F. X. Silva pushed the jack through for a lie of four. Omar drove with his first wood, struck a bowl in front of the jack, which was carried through with great speed, and the jack was sprung to the side to give the Craigengower rink a count of two. On this occasion C. G. Silva made a fine effort to save the score but was unsuccessful.

Omar Retains Form

For the losers the skip was the only one to play up to his usual form for all three others have been seen in better fettle. B. W. Bradbury took sometime to settle down but soon made his weight felt when he did. H. Beer was generally off form but on the occasions when the shot was a difficult one to play he often managed to put in a saver.

ONE MIXED DOUBLES LEAGUE MATCH TO-DAY

Four Colony Lawn Bowls Championship Games To-day

Three games in the Fourth Round of the Colony Lawn Bowls Singles Championship and one game in the Semi-final Round of the Pairs Championship will be decided to-morrow afternoon. H. A. Alves, one of the Recreio's best bowlers, meets T. Armstrong, one of the most improved players the Civil Service can boast, and a good game should ensue. Both players are very evenly matched.

H. Overy, if he maintains last week's form, should manage to overcome W. McLeod, of the Police, although this should also be a close encounter. U. M. Omar's conqueror, J. V. Ramsey, often described as one of the best No. 15 in the Colony, meets a Cinnamon, C. N. Mitchell, on the Storer, of Derbyshire, was dismissed in a curious manner when playing against Somerset. Alderman, who was playing opposite to him, drove a ball from Jack Lee hard and straight, and the bowler, trying to bring off a catch, turned the ball on to the wicket with Storer out of his crease.

J. D. ROCKEFELLER REACHES 96

Insurance Policy Of $1,000,000 Paid

COMPANIES' USUAL CUSTOM

New York.
Mr. John D. Rockefeller, known as "the richest man in the world," received another $1,000,000 on July 8 last.

At the age of 21, when he was a partner in a small firm, he took out his first life insurance policy.

July 8 was his 96th birthday, and the insurance companies followed their usual custom of paying off those who reach that age.

It is estimated that only one American policy-holder in 100,000 attains the age of 96.

Mr. Rockefeller is, said to have amassed a fortune of $480,000,000 during his lifetime, but he has given away huge sums.

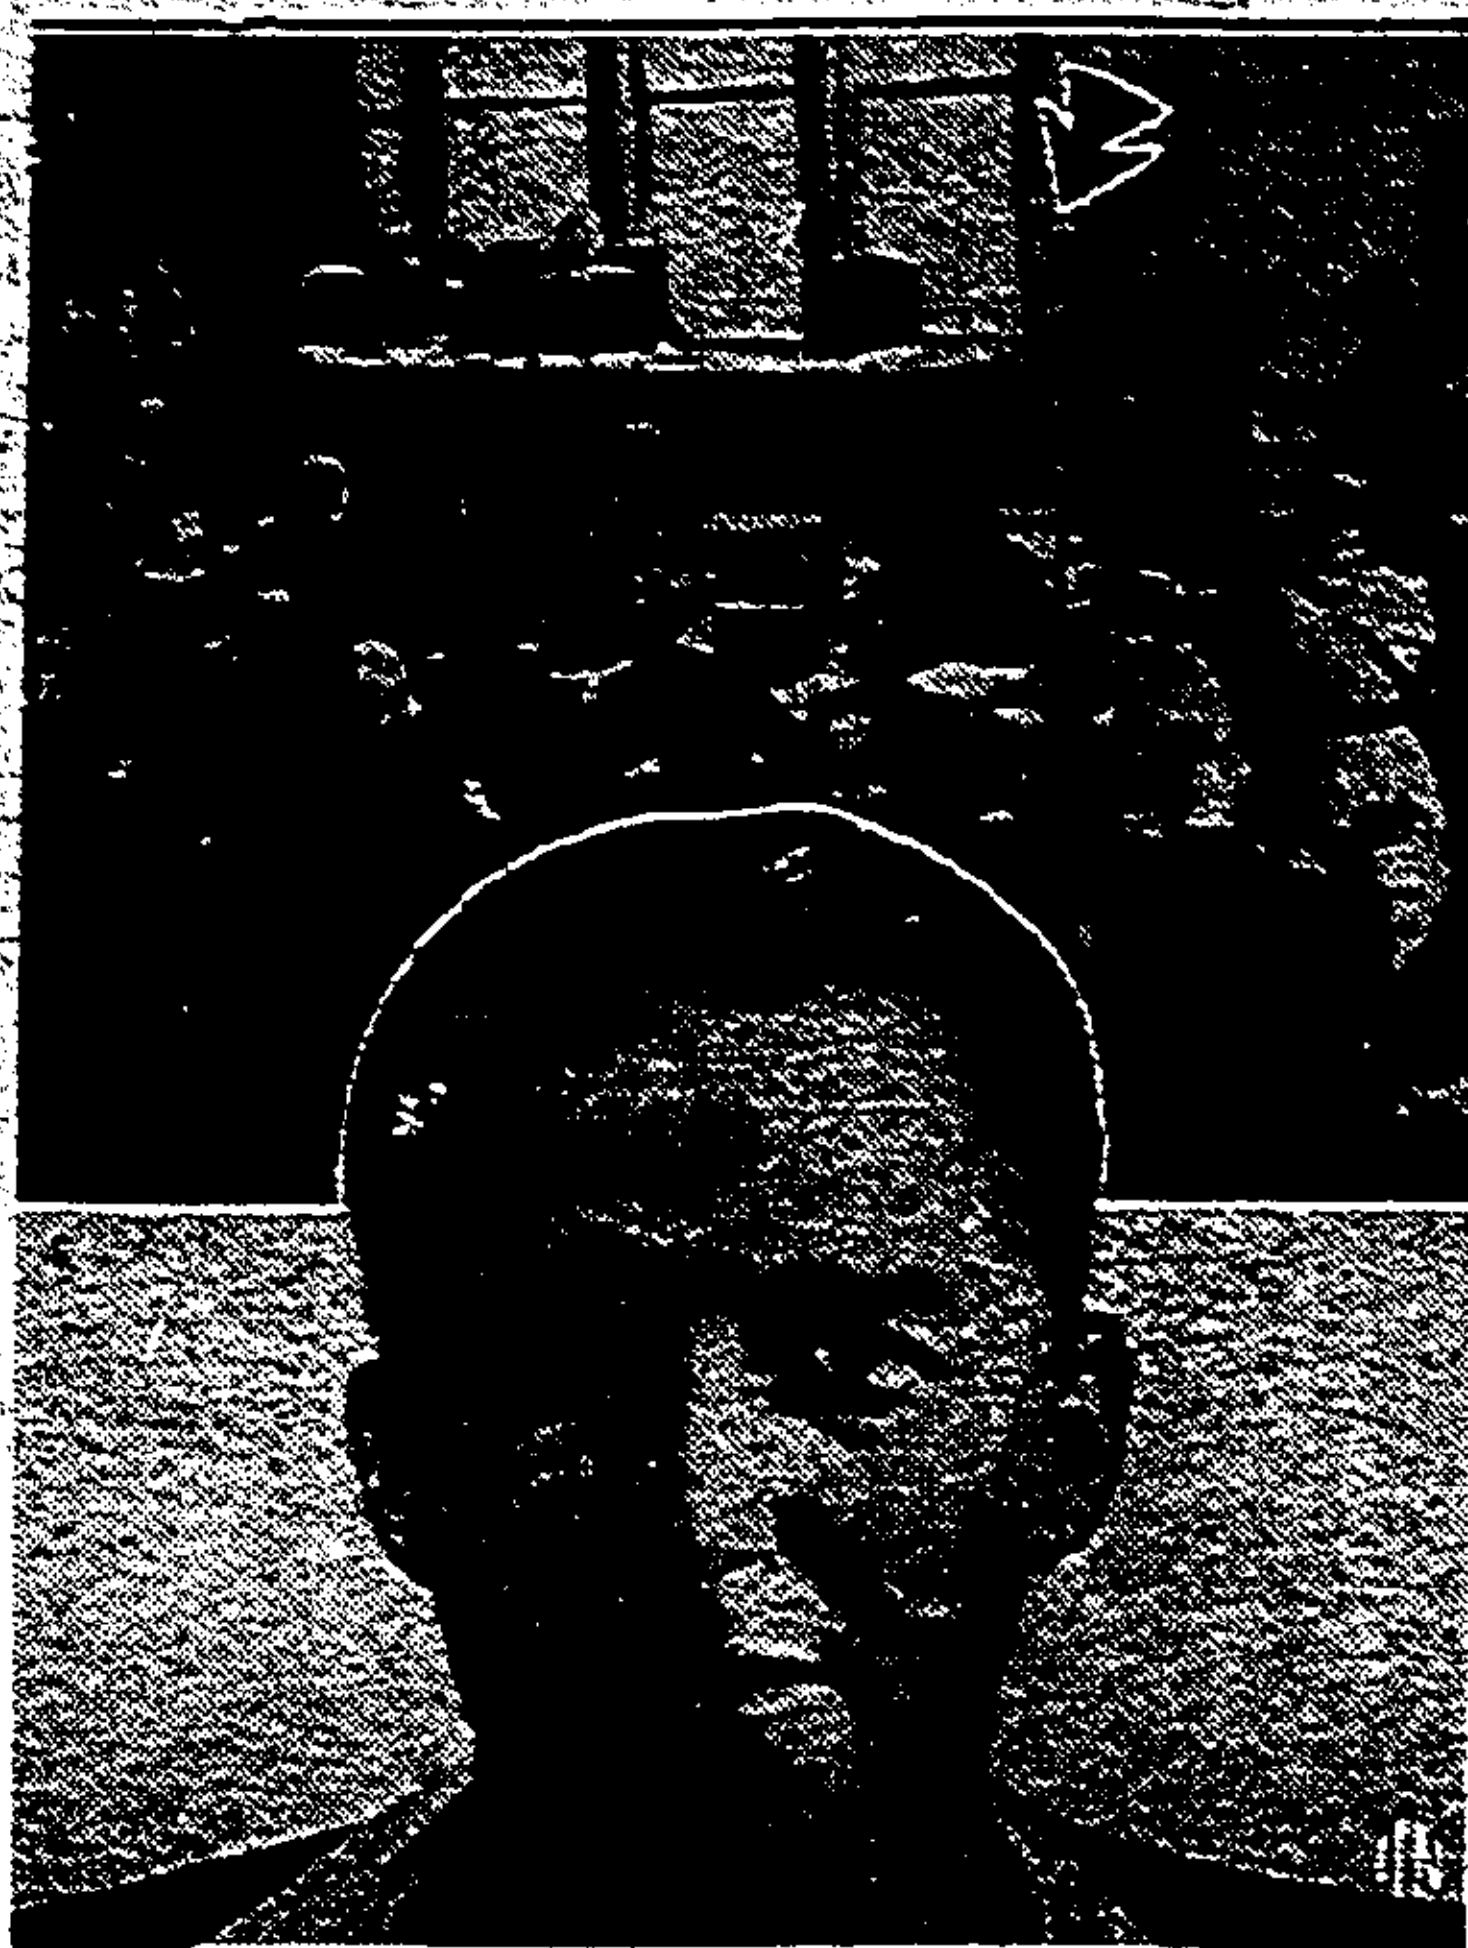

He is now at Lakewood, New Jersey, and is reported to be "extremely feeble." He may not go to Florida for his usual summer holiday.

BAG-SNATCHER WARNS P. C.

Inspector Logan, appearing on behalf of the prosecution, stated that at about 10 p.m. on Saturday, constable No. C612, who was on duty at the junction of Queen's Road East and Arsenal Street, heard shouts of "bag-snatching." When he arrived on the scene, he saw defendant struggling with the complainant. Accused broke away, but was arrested after a short chase.

Police constable No. C612 admitted that defendant approached him before committing the theft and told him that he was going to do some bag-snatching. He ignored the defendant but at the same time took note of his movements.

New Jersey State police have reason to believe that Harmon Waley (inset), confessed kidnapper of George Weyerhaeuser, heir to the timber millions, attended the Hauptmann trial at Flemington, N.J., as a spectator. Waley may be in this photograph, taken as Hauptmann (arrow), was testifying.

LITERARY NOTES

"MOVED ON"

IMPERIAL STUDIES

Convict System In Tasmania

"Governor Arthur's Convict System," by William Douglass Forsyth, forms No. 14 of the Royal Empire Society's Imperial studies. It takes Van Dieman's Land from 1824 to 1836, and shows how the convict system failed, both as penal discipline and as a type of colonisation, even although Governor Arthur was energetic, strong, and capable.

"Efficient, but autocratic, just but severe, moral but self-righteous," is Mr. Forsyth's description of the despot who worked strenuously for twelve years to carry out his system of government in Tasmania.

Mr. Forsyth's historical study is scholarly, well-arranged, and capably written. Particularly interesting is the final chapter on "Newspapers," which shows how "the spirit of freedom first came to grips with the convict-colonisation system" over the issue of the freedom of the Press.

UNHAPPY ODESSEY

Another Jew-Baiting Novel

"Bitter Draught" is another Jew-baiting book with most of its scene laid this time in Romania. It is offered as a novel, but written as it is in the first person, it produces an authentic autobiographical effect. There is no plot. We merely follow the unhappy Odessey of a Russian Jew in his wanderings and persecutions between Russia and his final safety in Paris.

As usual, one is struck most of all by the complete purposelessness of the persecution. Quite obscure people are harried for no apparent reason; some get away, and some do not; of those who do escape, some are sent back and some are not.

The book is harrowing in places and infuriating in others; and one hopes that it may serve as a document for future generations to wonder over, for its truth stands out in every line.

CLEVER MYSTERY STORY

The Alice in Wonderland atmosphere of "The Looking-Glass Murders" by Douglas G. Brown is purely accidental in this novel, and is due entirely to the fact that the plotters of a series of murders intended to secure the possession of material wealth conceived the idea of working

THRILLING NARRATIVE OF TRAVEL IN CHINA

Pavel Stepanovich Nazarov, geologist, naturalist, mining engineer, was engaged in exploring and developing the mineral wealth of Russian Turkestan when the revolution forced him to fly for his life. After two years of wandering and extraordinary adventure he finally escaped from his pursuers and took refuge in Kashgar, Chinese Turkestan.

The story of his experiences, as told in "Hunted Through Central Asia," attracted considerable attention in England and the English-speaking world, but no one dreamed that he would add a narrative almost as thrilling.

Exposed To Death

When the Chinese recognised the Soviets recently he found himself exposed to capture, imprisonment, and death, so there was no alternative but to set out over the Roof of the World, the Himalayas, to Srinagar, in Kashmir, where he found a welcome from the British Resident and complete safety.

This tremendous journey is the subject of "Moved On," ably translated by Dr. Malcolm Burr. Chinese Turkestan the author calls the "land of lost civilisation," and he devotes some chapters to it, describing its people, culture, and customs before the actual flight begins. Especially he deals with the personality and cruelties of General Tui, the fiendish Ti Tai, who at length over-reached himself and was assassinated.

Absorbing Interest

It was with something of relief that Mr. Nazarov set off to more civilised lands and modern peoples, and he had no fears about the trek on horseback with a caravan of camels, the deserts, the fearful heights to be crossed, the terrible abysses to be skirted, the loneliness and danger of it all. Many interesting people, travellers and natives, were encountered, and the writer describes both them and his slow progress in an absorbingly interesting manner.

Not the least strange of his meetings was with a beautiful young girl, alone, on foot, bound for Leh to work in the Moravian mission. But these lands were full of surprises.

Mr. Nazarov has since found a permanent home and occupation in Africa.

out their plan through opportunities given by a theatrical performance. The author has a dealt technique in unravelling the complexities of the crime and brings the reader safely through to the appropriate triumph of virtue without hesitation or lack of confidence. —E.H.

SAVIOR OF MEN

STORIES OF TWO CHILDHOODS

Charming Pictures Of Young Life

It was with no idea, perhaps, of comparison, that the late Lady Eleanor Acland, wrote the story of her own childhood in the years 1878-88, and that of her daughter, Ellen's, in 1913-24.

The two have been brought together in one volume, however, called "Good-bye for the Present" with an introduction by Professor George Trevelyan. Ellen's short life was terminated by an accident, and it is this, and the mother's reflections upon it, that give the title to the book.

There is very little difference in spirit between the autobiography and biography here, because of the mother's sympathy and understanding, and two charming pictures of young life in contrasted eras are drawn.

Biographical Study Of Marcus Aurelius

COMPARISON WITH FOUNDER OF CHRISTIAN RELIGION

"I have sought, to give a picture of the inner spirit of a man who, in the opinion of many students, corresponds more closely to our conception of flawless and angelic virtue than almost any other in history." That man is Marcus Aurelius, the Roman Emperor, and his biographer is Dr. F. H. Hayward, author of "The Unknown Cromwell."

In that assertion is an implied comparison with Christ, and Dr. Hayward does not hesitate to declare that "in nearly all the spiritual qualities on which the Christian Church at her best has laid stress (all of them at any rate except joy), as well as many others which the Church has unhappily left alone, Marcus is supreme."

Wise Life

The author of the "Meditations" has much to teach us, and not merely in that wise book, but in the conduct of his own life. That life is surprisingly little known; only one biography, that by C. C. Dove, published in 1930, interests us in the man, and it is a little unsatisfactory because it neglects or overrides the best scholarly opinion.

Thus Dove relates all the old scandals about the Empress Faustina, which Dr. Hayward believes to be largely untrue; he accepts as authentic certain letters which Dr. Hayward can discard.

The same is true of a novel centring on the Emperor, called "The Street of the Sandal-makers," which the present author finds little to his purpose. He places a new interpretation on certain acts and incidents in the career of his subject, and shows his character and personality in a saintly light.

"Save Men"

For example, Marcus Aurelius did not really despise the Christians; rather he admired them. His doctrine was "Save men. Life is short. This only is the harvest of earthly existence, a righteous disposition and social acts."

This, then, forms the justification of Dr. Hayward's title, "Marcus Aurelius, a Saviour of Men," and a frontispiece taken from a triumphal arch of 176 A.D. represents the Emperor giving mercy to captives.

VERITABLE HISTORY OF GEOGRAPHY

Opening Up Of The Earth

"The Background of Geography," by Mrs. M. Whiting Spillhaus, F.R.G.S., might well be called a history of geography, for it tells the tale of the discovery of the globe against a background of general history. And it does this comprehensively, starting with the Sumerians and Akkadians, and aptly ending with the arrival at the South Pole of Amundsen and Scott.

The opening up of the earth, land by land, sea by sea, makes an interesting story, and the book is thus a contribution to general knowledge. It is illustrated by maps and drawings.

FINE MYSTERY NOVEL

Successful First Attempt

A first mystery novel which at once admits the author into the exalted company of such masters as Dorothy Sayers and Asapha Christie, two writers who come particularly to mind because of an excellent feeling for character combined with a titivating sense of humour, is "A Question of Proof," by Nicholas Blake. This picture of a boys' preparatory school would have been sufficiently excellent stuff without any further complications; the mystery, well constructed with plenty of exciting incident, is solved by a satisfactory blend of observation and psychology.

STORY WRITTEN ON WALLACE PLEY

"Smoky Cell"

Mr. Robert Curtis has made an excellent story out of Edgar Wallace's play, "Smoky Cell." He can be complimented on avoiding imitation of the master's style, and yet he manages to produce a story which stands quite apart from the ordinary run. The narrative, grips the reader from start to finish and it has all those qualities which made Edgar Wallace so supreme in this particular line of story telling.

If Mr. Curtis can continue in this vein he will have a clear claim to a mantle which can no longer be worn by its original possessor. —E.H.

MATRIARCHAL TYRANNY IN CRIM SETTING

"The Harpy," by Eleanor Morse, is a grim story of matriarchal tyranny. The strong, will and quick temper which characterize Jerusha Hawkins as a girl rapidly sharpen and coarsen with the years. Late middle age sees her firmly entrenched in her prosperous, farmhouse, cracking the whip over the entire household, ruling with indomitable strength a tongue of venom and a succession of violent scenes, her sons, daughter, and grandchild. Miss Morse writes shrewdly and effectively, and cleverly blends tenderness and romance with harsh reality.

"Play Streets" For Children

The idea of "play-streets" for children, which recently received the official approval of the Minister of Transport, originated in Salford more than ten years ago. An experiment which has proved successful in the North will no doubt answer just as well in Paddington and Southwark, where the Borough Councils have agreed to collaborate with the Ministry. Certain streets in these two boroughs will be specially reserved as places where children can play in safety. The scheme will give a jolt to old-fashioned ideas of the purpose for which streets were made. Its justification is in the fact that 30 per cent of the deaths due to road and street accidents are of children under the age of 15. When they are playing they forget their danger, and as nothing will ever stop them playing in the streets, the idea of the "play-street," closed to motor traffic at certain hours, deserves the fullest sympathy.

If there were sufficient playgrounds and recreation grounds for the juvenile population, there would be no need for measures like this, and "play-streets" are certainly a very imperfect substitute for the former. Unfortunately, there are many districts where the provision of new recreation grounds is practically impossible. It is said that there are few complaints at Salford from the residents in the "play-streets," from which it may be inferred that some supervision is exercised over the games played. That may well be necessary, and the increased noise may also add to the trials of life for not a few. "Play-streets" would seem peculiarly suited to the cultivation of the spirit and low hurdling, and a benevolent borough council might even go so far as to supply the requisite apparatus. Even if no extra benevolences of this sort are provided, the children can be trusted to make their own games and adapt them to the limitations of their surroundings. The one thing needful is that they shall have the chance of playing in safety. Many L.C.C. school playgrounds are being kept open three nights a week during summer. Why should they not all be opened every night?

Training The Doctor

The authoritative Committee which has just reported in England upon the training of medical students makes it clear that the high-spirited youth of British hospitals do not need more than the present five years of study to emerge as discreet practitioners. So far from lengthening the curriculum, the acceptance of the Higher School Certificate as an exemption from the first M.B. examination may lessen it. The existing schedule of examinations imposes a dry and complex system of mnemonics upon the examinee, if he is to remember the less relevant minutiae of bodily structure and the symptoms of the most uncommon diseases. The Committee wish to bring the various qualifying examinations into greater uniformity. They also desire to lessen the effort of memorising in favour of a greater practical acquaintance with everyday instruments.

Clearly this simplification of training must not be carried to excessive lengths. On the other hand, the extension of early knowledge into the obscure and rarer diseases can seldom be entirely profitable. By the time that the practitioner meets his first case of the kind the knowledge which he had as a student is almost certainly blurred in his own mind and superseded by more recent specialist investigation.

ASCENT

General Goering has lost the famous dagger of honour presented to him by Herr Hitler for his services in connection with the Nazi rise to power.

The General may regret his departed trophy. (It fell into the Adriatic), but the loss should have its compensations.

It was this dagger that was responsible for the best Goering story.

The General was inspecting a large steel factory in the Ruhr when, to the surprise of all present, he was suddenly seen rising gracefully into the air.

He was not practising the rope trick.

A heavy magnet, placed in the roof and used for lifting steel rods, had attracted the dagger, and the other metal which covers the General's bulky figure.

MY LORD MAYOR

The Lord Mayor of London has many privileges consequent upon his ancient office which add to his dignity during the mayoralty. When the Sovereign opens Parliament in State, the Lord Mayor has a seat in the Peers' gallery of the House of Lords. Throughout his year he is addressed as "Right Honourable," though he is not a Privy Councillor.

On demise of the Crown, he is summoned to the Privy Council which at once meets, and he signs the Proclamation of the new King.

In the City of London he takes precedence of all persons save the Sovereign.

Looks are Deceiving. He was telling his aunt why the motorist at the cross-roads was being questioned by the policeman.

That fellow has been jumping the traffic lights," he said. "Extraordinary," she remarked. "He doesn't look a bit like an athlete."

Suitable. In one of the large lecture halls in a European city there appeared, close beside the speaker's stand, a single strong clothes hook in the wall, with a little placard, stating, "Only for lecturers."

A humourist wrote underneath, "May also be used for hanging his coat and hat."

With a Vim! He: "Who do you call this an enthusiastic stew?" Mike: "Because the cook put everything he had into it."

MUSSOLINI AND ABYSSINIA

WHAT ITALY REALLY DESIRES

DUCE'S GENIUS DESERVES A WIDER FIELD OF ACTION

(By G. Ward Price)

LAST April the British Government took part in a League of Nations vote of censure on Germany for rearmament. Only two months later the same Government negotiated a naval agreement which settles how Germany is to do it.

League resolutions leave unaltered the necessity for facing facts. Next month another choice between fact and theory will have to be made.

Mr. Anthony Eden, the newly appointed British Cabinet Minister for League Affairs, has already played a prominent part in the efforts of that body to interfere with Italian policy towards Abyssinia.

If these efforts are renewed when the present period of "arbitration" ends in foredoomed failure, Italy will leave the League, as Japan left it in consequence of similar attempts to obstruct her in Manchukuo.

Highly disciplined and energetically led nations like the Japanese, Germans, and Italians will not permit third parties to meddle with their vital patriotic aims, any more than this country would have allowed it when she was building up her own Empire.

It is not yet 40 years since war between Britain and France was only averted by the withdrawal of the French expedition which had occupied Fashoda, on the Upper Nile, and so threatened to interfere with our occupation of the Sudan.

Italian feeling with regard to Abyssinia is as little appreciated in England as our attitude in the Fashoda affair was understood on the Continent. I have had better opportunities than most people of becoming acquainted with it. In Rome recently I had an hour's private conversation with Signor Mussolini, which mainly dealt with the Abyssinian question. Similar talks in each of the thirteen years since he came to power have convinced me of the sincerity and frankness with which he speaks on such occasions.

Italy has two aims in East Africa, to which many counter-parts can be found in our own history. The first is to protect what she has got; the second is to secure new territory for overseas settlement.

The Danger. Eritrea and Somaliland may appear to us insignificant possessions, but they make up one half of Italy's Colonial Empire. They are narrow strips of territory, 3,000 miles from Italian ports, and each of them with a long and vulnerable land frontier bordering on the most powerful and warlike country in Africa, which can put into the field 500,000 well-armed men.

If war were to break out in Europe, those little Italian Colonies would be cut off. Italy could send them no reinforcements or supplies, for the Mediterranean would be closed by enemy submarines. What more likely than that the Abyssinian tribesmen, who for years have been raiding on the frontier, would take the opportunity to swoop down upon the isolated Italian garrisons? And what greater ignominy for the Fascist regime than to lose Colonies founded by the democratic Government which it displaced?

Settlement. Mussolini's immediate aim, therefore, is to put Eritrea and Italian Somaliland in a position to look after themselves, without support from home. For this purpose an army of 100,000 white troops and 200,000 native auxiliaries is being created there, with arrangements for their supplies to be drawn from sources beyond the Red Sea.

That is the first of Italy's aims in East Africa. The second is to secure ultimately for Italian settlement some of the lofty Abyssinian plateau with its bracing temperate climate and fertile soil. Italy, whose area is about half the size of France, has 2,000,000 more inhabitants. Only by hard work and a low standard of living can the Italian people exist in its cramped confines. Emigration is stopped by foreign restrictions. The territory in Asia Minor promised by the Allies during the war was never conquered.

It is natural, therefore, that Italy should look for new outlets in Abyssinia, a country so backward and brutal that the British Government 14 years ago protested against its admission to the League of Nations.

A Parallel. As far back as 1906 Britain, France, and Italy came to an agreement which contemplated the partition of Abyssinia between them into spheres of influence. Almost at the same time Britain and France made a similar arrangement by which Britain, in return for a free hand in Egypt, recognised the right of the French Government to penetrate Morocco. What France did in Morocco Italy now wants to do in Abyssinia.

These Italian ambitions in Abyssinia do not clash with our interests of ours or of the French. On the contrary, the unruly chiefdoms of the Abyssinian frontier districts may some day become as aggressive against us in the Sudan as they have shown themselves to the Italians in Somaliland.

Wider Field. By close on 13 years of brilliant administration Mussolini has given proofs of the benefits that his rule would bring to Abyssinia. The genius of the head of the Italian Government, which has transformed his own country, deserves a wider field. By opposing its extension to one of the last and most backward of independent native States we should be hindering the progress of civilisation.

LONDON PLAGUE OF FROGS!

Species Found In Italy

POTTERS BAR INVADIED

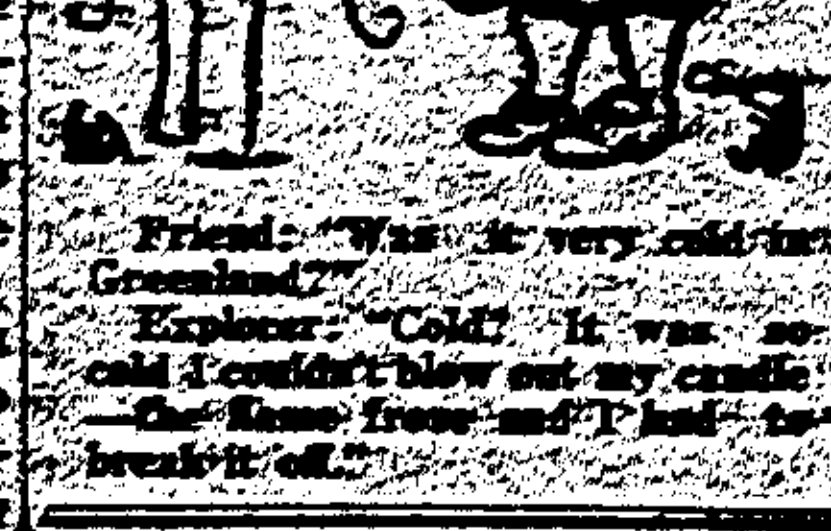

London. A plague of small bright-green frogs which have invaded gardens in Heath-road, Potters Bar, has been the subject of an appeal to the Ministry of Agriculture.

It is stated that the frogs do not belong to any English species but resemble those indigenous to Italy and other parts of Southern Europe.

According to residents, the frogs keep up a chorus of harsh croaking from dusk to dawn.

It is believed that some specimens from abroad may have escaped from an aquarium.

The appeal has been sent to the Ministry of Agriculture in the hope that means will be found to exterminate them.

MURDER & SUICIDE

Banned Courtship Ends Tragically

"ADVENTURE-SEEKING" GIRL'S ESCAPE

"Always seeking adventure" was the description given to a girl who was found shot beside her soldier-sweetheart in a wood near Bordon Camp, at the inquest at Alton, recently.

The girl's foster-father told the coroner that he had forbidden the couple to see each other again because the girl was too young.

The inquest was on Lance-Corporal Harry Parker, 21, of the 1st Oxford and Bucks Regiment, Bordon, and Ruby Cole, 17, also of Bordon.

Recently one night Parker was found shot dead in a wood about three miles from Bordon Camp. Miss Cole was lying unconscious beside him, and died in Alton Hospital later from a shot wound in the head without recovering consciousness.

When the inquest upon Parker was opened it was stated by Lt. Col. L. L. Pargiter, the commanding officer of the regiment, that Parker was his personal servant and had an exemplary character.

Medical Evidence

Dr. W. Russell Carling said Parker had a gunshot wound in the right temple and had been dead for at least 24 hours. The girl was unconscious, suffering from an injury to the left side of the head, and she died on Friday night without regaining consciousness.

Francis James Cole, a labourer, of Garden Cottage, Great Holt, near Bordon said his adopted daughter, who had worked as an assistant in a store at Bordon for last two months, came to know Parker about a month ago.

Too Young

Witness was quite unaware of the friendship for some time when Parker brought the girl home and asked to speak to him.

Parker asked if Mr. Cole had any objection to them keeping company, and he told him he did not approve of it because his daughter was too young.

Parker and the girl had a private conversation, and afterwards told him that they loved one another and would wait until she was 18.

Mr. Cole said that when the girl was 18 Parker would be welcome in the house.

Later the girl left work at one o'clock and came home and said she was going to the pictures with Parker, but Mrs. Cole refused to let her go.

"Clear Off"

Mr. Cole said he met Parker later in the afternoon, and Parker admitted making arrangements to take the girl out. Mr. Cole told him: "The best thing you can do is to clear off," but Parker followed him to the house and said he wanted to speak to the girl.

He allowed the girl to go out to meet Parker and they remained outside the house for about 20 minutes. She came back and told Mr. Cole: "I will wait now until I am 18."

The next morning, Mr. Cole said, he saw Parker at Col. Pargiter's and told him he had broken his promise.

Parker replied that if that were the case and he had to give up the girl, he would not be responsible for what might happen afterwards.

The Coroner: What did you think he meant?

Witness: I don't know.

"Cheerio — Good-Bye"

At one o'clock on the following Tuesday Parker came to see witness at Bordon and said, as he left, "Cheerio, Mr. Cole; goodbye."

That was the last he saw of Parker.

As the girl did not come home on Tuesday night it was her birthday and they had prepared a special little treat for her. Mr. Cole went to Bordon and searched for her until midnight.

The Coroner: What sort of disposition was she? She was always jolly, singing and seeking adventure. These words seeking adventure describe her best. She had gone away before on May 10.

On the Friday before that date, continued Mr. Cole, she left work and cycled to Portsmouth, where she remained on the beach all one

VIOLENT STORM CAUSES DUTCH AIRLINER CRASH

NO TECHNICAL DEFECTS MACHINE SUDDENLY NOSE-DIVES

Geneva, To-day.

Enquiries have revealed that a violent Alpine storm was responsible for the Dutch airliner disaster. According to the Chief Engineer of the Swiss Federal Aviation Department, both engines of the Douglas monoplane were in order and no technical defect was to blame.

When the storm beat the machine into the valley the pilot appeared to be heading for a suitable landing place, but the machine suddenly nose-dived and crashed among the trees. Reuter.

An earlier message stated that 10 passengers and four of the crew were killed when a Dutch aeroplane proceeding from Milan to Frankfurt-on-Main crashed near Messocco, in Canton des Grisons.

TWO BRITISH PASSENGERS According to information received at Amsterdam there were nine passengers and four crew aboard the Dutch airliner which crashed in Switzerland. The plane was apparently flying low in a storm when it crashed into a mountain side and caught fire.

All on board were killed instantly except a woman steward, who died of injuries before she was able to say anything regarding the cause of the accident.

All the victims were believed to have been Dutch, except two British passengers, whose names were believed to be Nesbitt and Watts.

BOAT TRAIN

By Roderick Morison

WHAT he said the thin, ascetic-looking Englishman as he sat down in the back-to-the-engine corner next to the platform, and put on his sourest expression.

Then he got up and glanced round the empty compartment. No other seats were reserved, except one under the name of Billingham, in the other corner along the same side.

All the more credit to him for his foresight, he thought, coming back to read the name-tab above his own corner—Mr. Quintus Granville. He had not crossed the Atlantic yet, but he knew what boat trains were like in any rush season.

The name-tab in itself would probably not have been enough. Anyhow, he had thought it essential to reach Waterloo in good time. But then he always did things in good time.

As he watched the passengers begin to drift down the platform in ones and twos, he hoped that some other celebrity would take a seat in the carriage. It might ward off possible conversation from himself.

A thought suddenly struck him. "Dolt that I am," he muttered and turned round to tear off the accusing little slip of cardboard above him. Now that he was firmly in the seat, why leave it there?

ARRESTED BRITON IN ARABIA

RELEASE ORDERED BY GOVERNMENT

London, To-day. It is understood that the Saudi Arabian Government has ordered the release of Lieutenant Chamberlain. — Reuter.

An earlier message from Jerusalem stated that Lieutenant Joseph Chamberlain, son of Sir Austen Chamberlain and company officer in the Transjordan Frontier Force stationed at Zerka, was reported to be in the hands of the Wahabis, having crossed with a patrol from Akaba into Hedjaz.

It was possible, in view of the frontier negotiations with Ibn Saud, that the release of Lieutenant Chamberlain might be delayed.

NO SIGNIFICANCE

A later message from London stated that no significance was attached to the detention of Lieutenant Chamberlain, and his early release was expected.

The delay was due to the necessity of communicating with Jeddah by a runner, but his release had already been arranged through the usual diplomatic channels.

Lieutenant Chamberlain inadvertently crossed the frontier in Saudi-Arabian territory on July 13 in an Army transport car and was arrested by the Saudi authorities. The second vehicle which went in search of him was also detained.

VICTIM OF RABIES

Young Stonecutter's Tragic End

Cheung Yan, a 19-year-old stonebreaker, died at 12.15 a.m. to-day in the Kowloon Hospital, a victim of rabies.

It is reported that he was bitten on the hand on June 15, but had received anti-rabies treatment. Yesterday, however, he complained of excruciating pains all over his body.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY

Coxswain Robbed By Three Men

A highway robbery was perpetrated at 4.30 a.m. to-day near Bay View Mansions when three men held up Lau Yik, a 57-year-old coxswain, and relieved him of $144.

The three men escaped across the Happy Valley, at 5.30 p.m. on direction of Tung Lo Wan Road, and no arrests have yet been made.

PUBLIC-SCHOOL BOY SENTENCED

Judge's Severe Censure

WARNING TO OTHERS

The idea that serious offences by young people should be treated as mere youthful lapses was criticised by Mr. Justice Charles at Hertford Assizes recently, when Cecil Henry Willmot, aged 26, a traveller, of St. Albans, was charged with entering houses and stealing jewellery.

It was stated that he had a good situation with a London firm, but was discharged for embezzling $65.

Counsel for the defence said accused belonged to a most respectable family, and was educated at a school at St. Albans.

His Lordship: I thought he had attended a different school. He is wearing an Eton tie. (Laughter.)

"Youthful Lapses"

"A great deal of the crime of this country is committed by people of your age or younger, and unfortunately the idea seems to have got abroad that people who commit very serious offences are entitled, because they have not been in prison before, to be bound over. I am afraid that is one of the reasons for such a great deal of crime among young people."

"I am asked to treat these offences as a sudden youthful lapse. It is not the kind of lapse, however, that I am going to encourage. I must punish you, not only for what you have done, but to let other people of your stamp know that it is quite wrong to think that really serious offences can be treated as if they were merely childish lapses."

Accused was sentenced to eight months in the second division.

BRITISH STAR HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Charles Laughton's Accident

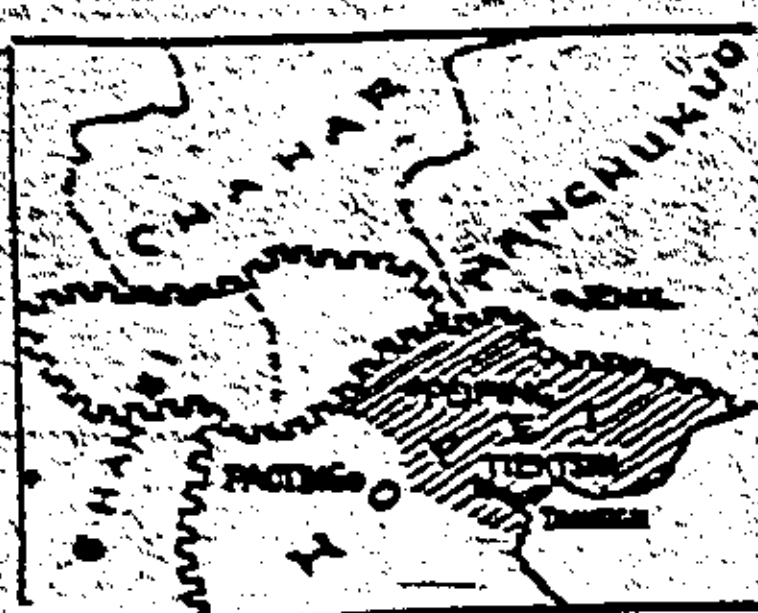

WITHIN ACE OF DEATH FROM DROWNING

Hollywood. Charles Laughton, the actor, had a narrow escape from drowning in the sea near Hollywood while taking part in the film, "Mutiny on the Bounty."

Production was in progress on board a ship off the Isthmus of Santa Catalina Island. A heavy sea was running, and Laughton was thrown from his feet and sent rolling across the deck and over the side of the ship where a portion of railing had been removed.

Fortunately, instead of dropping into the sea, he fell on to a platform built over the water for the camera crew. One of the technicians caught him and saved him.

Beyond a few bruises he was not injured.

Japan became master of the disturbed North China area shown in the shaded portion of the map (above) when the Nanking Government acceded to the demands of Col. Takashi Sakai (below), Japanese Commander, for the removal of troops and the cessation of anti-Japanese activities.

TROLLEY CARS FOR CANTON

Four New Lines To Be Opened

Canton, Saturday. In order to facilitate communications in the city, the Municipal Government is planning to establish four trolley lines in addition to the bus routes.

The first line will start from Sha-ho, pass through Wai-oi Road and Wing-hon Road, and terminate at Huangsha. The second line will start from Tungshan and terminate at Nan-on. The third line will start from the Canton-Kowloon Railway Station and terminate at Lai-chi-wen. The fourth line will start from Feng Wong-kong, Honam, and pass through Wai-oi Road and Feng Ning Road, and terminate at Huangsha.

There will be 40 cars, 10 for each line. Each car will accommodate 40 persons.—Central Press.

ASYLUM FOR LEPROS

New Project For Canton

Canton, Saturday. Mayor Liu Chi-wen is contemplating the erection of an asylum in the city for the use of persons who suffer from such diseases as leprosy and cannot find jobs.

The plan for the establishment of the asylum was approved by the Health and Social Affairs Bureau. The asylum will be erected at Fan-fok Road, where there will be constructed a building for treatment, a building for examination, a recreation ground and small factories for the training of the inmates in technical work.

It is estimated that the construction will cost about $50,000 and the monthly expenses will be about $1,800.—Central Press.

POLICE DRAG RIVER

Man's Clothes Found At Staines

London. The discovery by police officers of a man's overcoat, trilby hat and attache-case on a seat by the river at Staines, led to dragging operations being undertaken.

No further discovery was made, and the search was abandoned. The police had a clue to the identity of the clothing, which was believed to belong to a man reported missing from the Canterbury district.

151 BEGGARS PERISH IN HARBIN STREETS

Harbin. During June, 151 beggars were found dead in the streets of Harbin.

MAN'S SUICIDE BY SPIDER-BITE

Sensations Recorded While Dying

THE DEADLY "BLACKWIDOW"

Worcester, Massachusetts. Suicide by spider bite was the extraordinary method of self-destruction chosen by Stephen Liarsky, a homeless man of 26, who died in the City Hospital here.

In the shabby room where the ambulance man found him was a small cardboard box, containing a deadly blackwidow spider, with the venom of which Liarsky had infected himself. A card attached to the box, which had been sent from a dealer in California, bore a printed warning that the spider's bite was poisonous, and that no antidote was known.

Doctors gave emergency treatment with "adrenalin" and other restoratives, but without effect.

In a note, written after he had allowed the spider to bite him, Liarsky attempted to describe his sensations. "I feel the effects now," he wrote; "the room is going round and round, and I can hardly see."

MISSING EXPLORER

Col. Fawcett Said To Be Alive And Well

MISSIONARY BRINGS NEWS

Brooklyn. Colonel Fawcett, the British explorer who has been missing in Brazil for 10 years, is "alive and well and should be out of the jungle within eight months," according to the Rev. Father P. J. Molloy, a Catholic missionary from Buenos Aires, who has arrived in Brooklyn.

Father Molloy said that he had not talked with Colonel Fawcett, but that he had met a tribal chief known as "White Son of the Sun," who recently left the jungle to visit civilisation.

"The chief told me that Colonel Fawcett is in the Zingru River district, in the section near the watershed of the Amazon and Parana rivers," said Father Molloy.—Reuter.

Colonel H. P. Fawcett, accompanied by his son and Mr. Raleigh Rummel, disappeared in May, 1925, when exploring Central Brazil.

Many expeditions have combed the wild Matto Grosso jungles for them and many strange stories have centred about Fawcett's name.

2,000-YEAR-OLD POTTERY FOUND AT EXETER

During excavations in High-street, Exeter, two specimens of what are believed to be first or second century B.C. pottery, both bearing the impress of the potter's fingers, were unearthed.

WINDERMERE A REAL CAMP

Striking while the iron is hot is a characteristic of the West that has gained the admiration of the rest of Canada. And so there is little surprise in the announcement that the Board of Trade at Invermere, B.C., has leased the beautiful lake Windermere for this summer in anticipation of increased tourist traffic to the Canadian Rockies, which has been generally forecast in Europe, the Orient, and the United States.

The camp, which is being taken over by small but energetic Invermere, is one of the most delightfully situated in the Canadian Rockies. Built originally by the Canadian Pacific Railway, this camp has been successfully operated for the past several years as a private camp for girls. In the centre of an ideal vacation district, it is easily reached by main mountain highways. The famous Banff-Windermere road leads to it, a good alternative route being through the mountains from Cranbrook. The lake averages about 63 degrees in the summer and is ideal for swimming and boating. Excellent trout fishing can be had in several creeks and smaller lakes near by and the lake itself has landlocked salmon of considerable size. Within a day's ride in its way as that of the gentleman on my left.

The camp is a particularly good centre for a whole summer's rest and exploration, because many are the side trips that can be made by car, mountain-bred ponies, or on foot to adjacent spots of beauty or historic interest. Tennis courts and motor launches are available for the use of the guests.

There is accommodation for 42 guests in the camp, which consists of a large main building, with wide verandah, and of separate small bungalows, equipped with single beds, stove, clothes closet, nice furniture, running water, and electric light. A double bath-house, with hot and cold running water, contains separate bath rooms.

"Oh, of course, Mr. Granville. How silly of me! You must think me a little fool. But you know, I do know my London. I've been here two months. Seeing everything, you know. The Crown Jewels. Why don't you write about them? The Thief in the Tower. Except, I suppose, that they sink down into the floor, and are shut up."

The thin, ascetic-looking Englishman smiled and said nothing. Then he looked out of the window. The clock said nine-eight. Seven minutes to go. People were hurrying down the platform now.

"Oh, and as we are talking about 'Who Goes Home?' there was just—"

But at that moment the door opened, and a square-jawed man of athletic build climbed in, followed by a girl with liquid brown eyes and blooming cheek.

"Why, Andy?" exclaimed the florid lady. "Our own little Andy!"

"Well, if it isn't Big Bertha!" said Andy. "Say, Jimmie, is this swell?"

"I'll say it is!" said the girl, with a silvery giggle like the top of an arpeggio.

Bertha swung her finger to and fro like a conductor's baton.

"Whole State of Michigan!" she chanted happily.

"Whole State of Michigan!"

"Whole State of Michigan!"

roared Andy, piped Jimmie, as they sat down next to her, Andy next to the clerkman, who looked up in mild astonishment and then went on reading his newspaper.

When the laughter had subsided, Big Bertha spoke again.

"Oh, Andy," she said. "Meet Mr. Granville. You know, Mr. Quintus Granville. He and I have been having a long discussion, and I'm learning a whole lot."

"Pleased to meet you, Mr. Granville," said Andy. "My name's Brissie. Town of Pontiac. This is Jimmie, my daughter. Guess you're born and bred in this dear-old-England."

"For England's the one place I know where men with splendid hearts may go."

"That was Jimmie. 'I don't have to ask you who wrote that, Mr. Granville,' she said, her eyes filling with affinity."

Andy ignored her. Coming to Michigan, Mr. Granville? But what a question to ask! You authors never come to Pontiac. It's Hollywood every time, isn't it?

"Missing so much and so much," said Jimmie, a faraway look in her very lovely brown eyes.

Andy ignored her. "The trouble, sir, with our two nations is this: 'We don't see enough of each other. I mean, we don't get under each other's skins.'"

"The English-speaking nations of the world—and I include your great Commonwealth of Nations, sir—should get together—as man to man—by travel, by radio—yes, sir, and by literature. You yourself have a great mission, as great in its way as that of the gentleman on my left."

The clerkman heard the last words, and looked up. "I beg your pardon," he said.

"I was only saying, sir, that Mr. Granville has a great mission. You have read his books, of course?"

"Can't say I have," said the clerkman. In the awkward silence he smiled, and then went on reading.

"Well, as I was saying," went on Andy, "by these means, and by these means only—"

"Running for Governor, Andy," asked Bertha innocently.

"Maybe," said Andy. "maybe. But for the next six days I'm running for the medicine ball, I guess." He slapped his leg.

"Care for medicine ball, sir? No, you don't have to tell me. That's what I like about you English. You're a nation of sportsmen. Gymnasium every morning for you, won't it be? You don't have to tell me!"

"Well, medicine ball it shall be, at eight sharp every morning. Then a swim. Then—and how you'll scribble!"

"And a little bridge after dinner. A fine mental exercise, sir. 'Do you play contract? I'll teach you a new system. You can pick it up—like that.' He snapped his fingers."

"But as I was saying. Get together. And where better than on board ship? No conventions. Every type under the sun—rubbing shoulders. Deck games with some, talks with others, bridge with others, and, well, our Jimmie's mighty fond of dancing."

"Sure I am," said Jimmie. "But I hope there's no stag line. I like to stand for a stag line. I like one partner. I guess I'm different that way, but—you can talk so much more, can't you, Mr. Granville?"

"And I've so much I want to talk about. India, for instance. We had an Indian professor come to college last fall. He was a peach. And I do think he was quite right."

"India for the Indians, it must be. But you probably don't think so. English people don't. What they have they hold. Who said that? But I guess we can talk anyway. I've talked to lots of Englishmen about India, but they haven't convinced me."

"How about Nicaragua?" asked Bertha.

"Oh, Nicaragua's different isn't it, Mr. Granville? No, India's what interests me. And Ireland. I guess we can find plenty to talk about, though I know Bertha'll want—"

"Ireland has produced the world's greatest dramatist," pronounced Bertha.

"Except Shakespeare," said Jimmie. "Don't you think so, Mr. Granville? Or do you stick to the Bacon?"

But the thin, ascetic-looking Englishman was not listening. He had just seen a stout little man with pince-nez bustling down the platform. He bent his head until the late-comer had passed. Then he stood up with a hasty "Excuse me," banged the door open with his knees, half fell out and hurried along the platform.

The stout little man saw him as he drew alongside.

"Ha, Billingham! There you are. Good man. Where do I get in?"

"Back here, sir," whispered the tall, ascetic-looking Englishman. "That open door. But not under your name. I took two. Billingham's yours, sir. Opposite the clerkman. And he's your style, sir."

With which advice, Billingham, valet and friend, turned on his heel and walked swiftly to the barrier.

THE END.

GERMAN BUTCHER GAOLED

Allowed Cats To Walk On Counter

Nuremberg (North Bavaria):

Because he "let cats walk around on the counters of his shop," a butcher of Nuremberg, North Bavaria, has been sentenced to six months in gaol.

The butcher is Karl Bechoefer. He had been in business in the city of Nuremberg for 10 years.

The Bavarian State Court, in passing sentence, declared: "Herr Bechoefer has committed a crime against the people by allowing one cat to push pieces of meat on the floor where another cat freely devoured them."

fore answerable for his death. The premises at which the incident had occurred, No. 157 Des Voeux Road, Central, belonged to the defendant, and he lived there with his children and an uncle who acted as a servant. There were also several other servants in the household. The accused lived apart from his wife and Mr. Fraser said that it was important to the case that the accused blamed deceased for the separation. So strongly did he feel about this that he had written a letter setting forth the facts concerning the separation and had signed it with his own blood.

GROUND FOR OBJECTION
Mr. Jenkin interrupted at this point with an objection and said that the letter was inadmissible, whereupon Mr. Fraser told His Lordship that he based his whole case on the evidence supplied by the document.

Mr. Jenkin then gave the grounds on which he had objected. In the first place the man was charged with manslaughter and not murder, and that the state of his mind at the time of the incident was wholly immaterial. Secondly, he submitted, if the document was intended to show the state of accused's mind at the time, then it was entirely contrary to the Crown case on its own evidence. On the Crown's own evidence it was obvious that the man had been entirely motivated by other circumstances.

Mr. Fraser then submitted that when the deceased had arrived at accused's house the latter had seen in it a chance to revenge himself for the deceased having alienated his wife's affections. He therefore picked a quarrel. "Furthermore," Mr. Fraser went on, "the use of the nails on the deceased, and the attack by three persons, amounted to nothing less than a certain form of torture."

MERCIFUL VIEW
Mr. Lindsay: "Why was not the accused indicted for murder?"

Mr. Fraser: "After this affair the two other persons who took part in the assault, and who are therefore just as guilty as the accused, could not be found. Also when the coroner's inquest was held the jury took a merciful view and brought in a verdict of manslaughter. In these circumstances it was not for the Crown to bring in a charge of murder, although I agree that there is a charge of murder against the accused."

"This man jumped over the verandah to escape assault by some other men. It is for the defence and Crown to show who was the instigator of the assault, and the Crown asserts that the accused was that person. This document shows how strongly the accused felt against deceased about his wife, and supplies the motive for the crime."

SOLICITOR AS THE COMPLAINANT

Goose Stolen By Unemployed

Mr. H. Brutton, the well-known solicitor, appeared as the complainant in a case against Au Wing-sheng, a 35-year-old unemployed, for the theft of a goose valued at $3 from No. 4 Po Shan Road, West Point, at the Central Magistracy this morning.

The accused, who was caught in possession of the goose at the Bonham Road junction, was sentenced to one month's hard labour by Mr. S. H. Balfour.

APPEAL TO CHILDREN

Mr. Lindsay: "I think the document is admissible as showing that the defendant was liable to assault the deceased."

Continuing, Mr. Fraser read the letter, the gist of which was an appeal to his children to revenge the wrong the deceased had done to him, and advising them that he was a great enemy of the family. It was dated August 26, 1934, a fortnight before deceased's death.

In describing how the man had lost his life, Mr. Fraser said that on the night in question, deceased had called on accused. There were about 10 other people present, and the accused had evidently been drinking rather heavily. He was shown into a sitting room at the rear of the house, while the accused was in the accounts office talking to a friend. Deceased did not know that accused knew anything about his affair with his wife and thought that his position as a friend was the same as before. A quarrel arose between the two men and the accused was heard to say "his sign had been discredited," while the deceased shouted that it had not.

QUARREL PREMEDITATED

This quarrel had evidently been premeditated by the accused and this view is supported by the fact that the accused was armed with two long nails which he used as one would a dagger and struck deceased on the forehead. At this point, Counsel continued, accused's two friends, So Ping and Shun King-luk, entered the fight. Wong Pak-ku managed to break away and jumped to his death.

The first witness called was Mr. Grimes, chief draughtsman of the P. W. D., and he gave formal evidence concerning the accuracy and reliability of the plans produced in court. Sergeant Moran, Police photographer, gave evidence to the effect that he had taken certain photographs of the scene of the crime and recognized them as the ones produced in court.

The case is proceeding.

HALLIBURTON ARRIVES AT ST. BERNARD PASS

The elephant, tired with its long climb, was bribed to proceed with lumps of sugar, and there was a regular traffic block in the pass, a stream of motor-cars being held up behind the pachyderm.

DISINCLINED TO PROCEED WITH EXCURSION

"CHINA MAIL" SPECIAL

Berne, To-day.

After many halts and much urging of "Miss Dolly," the modern Hannibal, the American journalist Richard Halliburton, arrived at the famous Hospice of St. Bernard at 2 p.m. on his reluctant steed.

The elephant had found the last miles of the ascent particularly trying, due to the rarefied air at this height, and from the point known as Combe de Monts had shown the greatest disinclination to proceed with the Alpine excursion.

In order not to impose undue hardship on the animal through keeping it longer than necessary in this atmosphere Halliburton did not spend the night at the hospice, as he had intended, but commenced the descent on the Italian side after a short rest.—Trans-Ocean Service.

SECRET BOOK BY COL. LAWRENCE

It was stated by his literary agent in London recently that Col. T. E. Lawrence (Aircraftsman T. Shaw), left a manuscript entitled "The Mint" with instructions that it should not be published before 1950. The book records his life in the Royal Air Force.

It is understood to contain comments on the R.A.F. which make its immediate publication impossible.

AN EXPENSIVE BUSINESS

A message from Rome states that the Italian budget for the past year shows a deficit of 1.5 milliard lire, after special expenditure for the African colonies has been deducted, according to the returns published by the Treasury for the financial year ended June 30. The national debt amounts to 105 milliard lire.
